

Creation Cries Out

Beauty

We find beauty as an emergent property in the world

- Beauty in the natural world
- Beauty in design in the natural world
- Beauty within humanity

Brokenness

We find a profound brokenness in the world

- Brokenness in nature (natural disasters, disease, etc.)

Brokenness in humanity (war, hate, greed, envy, human trafficking, etc)

There is a universal recognition that the world is not the way it “should” be.

This leads to the following questions that a robust worldview needs to answer:

- How we can recognize the transcendent beauty in the world
- How we can “know” the world should be a different way
- That the world was created without brokenness
- How brokenness came into the world
- A purpose to the “felt” evil in the world
- Dealing with actions of moral evil
- Restoration of the world to an unbroken state

Creation is crying out to us revealing a God who designed this world, who has made a way to restore our broken relationship with Him and His creation, and will restore all things
